HABITAT Sur

Nature Reserve

Km. 16, vía Leticia – Tarapacá

This is our Hábitat Sur

We are located 16 kilometers from Leticia, the capital of the Colombian Amazon, in an area of 240 hectares of Amazon jungle, where we have developed a responsible tourism program and a way of life based on agro-ecological principles and practices, the use of renewable energies, appropriate technologies for the care of water such as composting toilets, the restoration of ecosystems which have been interfered with and the protection of a natural reserve area that covers 98% of the plot.

The nature reserve is a social enterprise linked to Hábitat Sur Foundation. Part of the income generated by the Responsible Tourism Program is reinvested in the Foundation's cultural, environmental education and community development initiatives.

Who we are

Hábitat Sur is an initiative of people who are deeply connected with the Amazon and its people from the heart.

We firmly believe in the enormous social, cultural and ecological capital of this region. To preserve it, we have created cultural and environmental spaces in which we promote the exchange of traditional, academic and empirical knowledge about the Amazon and promote more sustainable practices for life in the jungle.

Our spaces

The reserve has three cabins that have been built using local bio-construction techniques mixed with modern architecture, respecting the region's traditions and highlighting the knowledge of indigenous peoples of the Amazon in the management and construction of their own built environments.
